

Leading by Convening

Coalescing Around Issues

Meet the Stakeholders

For every issue, there are a number of groups that have deep and durable connections at the practice level. Some are very closely aligned with the issues that you are trying to influence. Others have more distant, yet still important, connections. In either case, stakeholder groups have influence in what practitioners know, believe and do. Stakeholder groups can be important allies in moving new and/or proven practices to implementation!

To meet and address persistent challenges, we encourage leaders to identify and reach out to their potential partners.

Type of Partner	Partner Name	Contact Information
Organizations and groups that represent those responsible for directly implementing this practice.

Continued

Meet the Stakeholders (continued)

Type of Partner	Partner Name	Contact Information
Organizations and groups that represent those individuals with authority in the environments where this practice must be implemented.
Organizations and groups with influence on the practitioners and consumers that care about this issue.
Other
Other		